Hochtief Polska is a subsidiary of one the world's largest international construction companies. Hochtief is also active in the construction of office buildings, retail buildings, industrial buildings and sport facilities, public buildings. The company has exceeded the classic service of the general contractor and offers property development for medium and small residential as well as commercial buildings.

Currently the company is involved in the extension and modernization of the airside and landside infrastructure of the airport terminal in Wroclaw. We have spoken with Mr. Maciej Berkowski who is the project manager of this project.

A passenger terminal with one of the biggest cubic measures in Poland (330 429,81 m³) will be build. Connected to the airside a luggage sorting hall, departure hall and arrival hall together with accompanying spaces will have to be constructed. Connected to the landside there will be free access areas, ticket desks, service desks and offices and retailshops, all of them need to provided for.

During our meeting Mr. Berkowski informed us about the status of the project. "Everything is being realized according to schedule" said Mr. Berkowski. Within six months after winner of the tender was announced, Hochtief Polska was able to perform more than 70 percent of the excavation and they already started to pour out the fundamentals. On the location five tower cranes have also been installed.

Due to the fact that the project has just started to be realized Mr. Berkowski will invite the subcontractors to present their offers in the second quarter of 2010. That might be companies who can offer products and services for interior work which are functional for airport terminal. In briefly, that can be companies who offer products and services for security systems, lighting systems, offer fire extinguishing products, manufacturer of small steel products (for examples barriers) and products for indoor and outdoor signage. He kindly asked to call him at this time to gather more details about specific questions.
